What an absolutely crazy two months it has been. I've never missed so many bull sales due to bad roads, ever. The big snowstorms just keep coming. It is a year for the record books in terms of cold and snow in South Dakota and many of the surrounding states. We are in the northwest corner of South Dakota. After enduring a storm with gale-force winds, snow and -50+ weather, we got pummelled with two more storms.

I started writing this as we awaited yet another major winter storm. So much for March coming in like a lion and going out like a lamb. I guess we still have a few days to go until April but in our area most of the months of February and March were lions.

This time the storm system is being called a bombogenesis. I'd never heard this term before this week. In meteorological terms it is when a non-tropical storm's central pressure drops by at least 24 millibars in 24 hours. In layman's terms it means a beast of a winter storm which brings every bad element a winter storm can have — rain, freezing rain, flooding, lots of snow and incredibly strong wind. Some news reports even called it an inland hurricane.

It's definitely not the kind of storm ranchers want to go through and in our area it immediately brings memories of the 2013 Winter Storm, Atlas. We are all hoping and praying it

Hereford Breed is Backbone of Melcher Ranch, Provides for Several Generations

Page, NE — Many longtime Hereford breeders have a similar story: they continue to choose the red and white breed because it has provided for their family for generations. Don Melcher and his family's operation, Melcher Herefords Inc., is no different.

Don's grandparents, Ed and Emma, moved to Page from Stanton County in 1911. His father, Harold, was born six years later and was the youngest of the family. When Ed passed away in 1938, Harold stepped up to take over the operation with his mother.

Carlson Herefords: Building from Longtime Hereford Base

Carlson Herefords near Murdoch, MN, has a rich history in the Hereford breed, covering both horned and polled, show cattle, breeding, feeding and retail experience.

By B. Lynn Gordon

Ross and Rob Carlson, Carlson Herefords, Murdock, MN, have been surrounded by Hereford cattle since they can remember. Their grandfather and father always had Herefords and they knew it was only fitting they did as well. "Our grandfather had commercial cattle but always bred them to a Polled Hereford bull and our great-uncle used Horned Hereford bulls," says Ross. There was no question, Herefords wouldn't stay in the family. "Problemfree, good temperament, total performance cattle," says Rob, "and now the ability to offer homozygous polled is why we like Herefords so much."

The two brothers have carried on the Carlson family operation. They each own their own cowherd but run the cattle together for efficiency of both grassland, facilities, and time management. The operation also consists of cropland planted to corn and soybeans primarily and when the busy planting and harvest seasons hit, it makes running the cattle together easier to manage. When the two brothers took over the operation, they evenly divided up the cowherd, gate cutting the cattle. They are fortunate to have most of their pastureland nearby.

is not that severe. One big difference is this one is in the Spring and Atlas was in the fall.

Ranchers are as prepared as they can be for this one with extra hay, cake and bedding, getting cattle moved to shelter and moving baby calves inside barns and not wasting any time about it.

I am writing this over the course of several days and the storm has passed through now. We were fortunate in this area and did not get the foot of snow that was forecast but we did have considerable drifting due to high wind. Other areas such as central South Dakota and Nebraska, got hammered but the storm cut a swath from the Mexico border to the Canadian border.

In a brief conversation with one friend in central South Dakota, he said he thought this recent storm was "their Atlas," referring to the 2013 storm that devastated western South Dakota, Nebraska and eastern Wyoming, but they were still digging out and he didn't know the extent of their problems yet but anticipated a negative outcome. Two other breeders we talked to in central South Dakota were busy digging out and getting to cows and calves as of press time. I am hopeful for all of them, as the weather warms up and there are no predictions of further storms at least for the immediate future.

News out of Nebraska isn't good in the north-central part of the state near Spencer where there is deadly, catastrophic flooding. The Spencer dam was partially breached on March 14 sending millions of gallons of water downstream and taking out a bridge over the Niobrara River on Hwy 281 and at least one more in the same area. The highway is closed indefinitely.

On Thursday, March 14th a small electrical plant was lost when the Spencer Dam failed at the Niobrara River and caused a large ice floe to jam a hole in the building. Workers inside

"Dad was the youngest boy, and the only one home at the time, so he took over the operation with grandma," Don explained.

Then in 1946, Harold and his wife, Erna, purchased the land from his mother. At the time, the Melchers had Shorthorns, and it wasn't until the fall of 1948, right before the "big blizzard", that Harold purchased his first registered Hereford heifer.

"The neighbors had registered Herefords and dad didn't have a lot of acres," described Melcher, "so he had to do something to generate more dollars with a limited amount of acres in order to provide for the family."

With the 25 registered heifers that Harold purchased that year, he was able to sustain his wife and three boys.

"They provided for mom and dad and the three of us boys. They educated us and [allowed] the next generation to go to college. Herefords have been good to us," Don explained.

Whether they knew it or not, Harold and Erna sparked a deep passion and respect for the Hereford breed into their own children that has only continued to grow in the 71 years since their first purchase.

The Legacy Carries on and Adapts

Harold and Erna's sons, Jim, Tom, and Don were next in line to take over the ranch. Tom left to pursue other ventures in 1981 and Jim retired in 2012. Since then, it has been Don, his wife Jean, and their growing family that has stepped up to carry on their family's legacy.

Since the time Don's father purchased those 25 Herefords, their ranch has definitely grown and adapted. The Melchers currently operate on roughly 2,000 acres with about 130 spring and fall calving registered cows, 375 horned and polled commercial heifers, 25 head of Baldy heifers, and 25-30 registered bulls that they sell through private treaty and video auction.

While a majority of their cattle are sold private treaty, like their family has done for years, the Melchers have begun to adapt to a changing client base who has an increasing reliance on technology. In January, they held their first video auction for their 30 registered Hereford bulls.

With the help of Marc Hotchkiss, The Livestock Link. Don was able to reach out to new clients with the online sale while also catering to his long-time customer base. They collaborated to find a way that people could either bid online or were able to come to the Melcher ranch and bid in person during the sale.

"We were concerned that some of our customers wouldn't be comfortable with the online stuff, and we wanted them to be able to participate...they all caught on eventually," Melcher

The Melchers are going to hold this sale again next year, while continuing to work on reaching out to their customers in both traditional and new ways.

"We are trying to bring new knowledge and expertise to our marketing," Don said.

Utilizing the Hereford Breed

While the Melchers stand behind the purebred Hereford, they are also big proponents for the use of Hereford genetics as a way to enhance the Angus breed in both fleshing ability and disposition.

Don explained how the benefits of the not to take advantage of.

Don explained how breeders "need to use Hereford genetics to increase their pounds." On top of that, he believes the disposition qualities that the Hereford brings to the cross are undeniable.

"The black and red Baldies are the queen of the mother cow," he stated.

Melcher described how his customers

Hereford/Angus cross are too obvious a stalwart of the beef-cattle industry for many years. Others have come and gone, but the Hereford cow remains," Melcher stated.

> In their experience, the Melchers have seen that the horned Hereford's "advantages are their disposition, their consistency, and over the years they have been a rancher/range type animal.'

Melcher highly recommends that "if

Kevin and Sherry's daughters, Madison (15) and Ashley (13), enjoy showing cattle and and have started their own herds.

who go with the Baldy option are "topping the sales with their cattle."

The Melchers are also very proud of the quality purebred Hereford genetics that they provide for their customers, and even though they offer both horned and polled options, Don stands firmly behind his horned Herefords.

The Melcher's heifer development program, which sources its cattle anywhere from North Dakota to Kansas, has seen a high demand for the horned Hereford.

"Seventy-five to 80% of customers ask if we have any horned Hereford Heifers for sale," Don stated.

In Don's opinion, this high demand comes from the reputation of horned genetics.

"The horned Hereford cow has been you have a herd of commercial horned Hereford cows, keep them that way, because there is a demand for the top end replacement heifers."

But, no matter polled, horned or crossbred, the Melchers pride themselves on the quality of Hereford genetics that they provide their customers.

The Melchers prioritize their cattle "being true on their feet, being sound for longevity, walking free and easy, and of course, you have to have that eye appeal."

On top of the phenotypes of their cattle, Don explained how strictly they sort their cattle to ensure they have the best dispositions.

"Anything that hits a gate or stirs up trouble, they're out. We don't tolerate it," he said. This is a mentality that was passed down to Don from his father, Harold.

"Dad always told me that if you're gonna work them 365 days a year, you better have something you enjoy working with," Don recalled.

A Time of Transition

Now, at the age of 66, Don and Jean recognize that their ranch is at a point where it is time to pass the torch to the next generations.

"We're getting into the neighborhood of turning over responsibilities," Don explained.

Two of Don and Jean's sons, Kevin and Matt, have come back to the family operation. Kevin takes care of the financials, is in charge of Al'ing, and is beginning to take over the major breeding plans, and Matt takes care of the extensive AHA bookwork. Don and Jean's daughter, Crystal, and her husband, Jason, are not directly involved with the operation, but help whenever they can.

To Don, this is more than just the daily grind. The fact that his family is coming back and taking ownership of the ranch means a lot to him.

"It is extremely rewarding to have my two boys back and working together on a daily basis, and I take a lot of pride that I instilled the love of the land and the cattle in them, that they're willing, and want to do this with their lives," Melcher said.

On top of that, the Melcher grand-children are starting to contribute to the operation as well. Kevin and his wife Sherry are the parents to four children: Jordan, Madison, Ashley, and Dylan. Don explained that Kevin's daughters, Madison (15) and Ashley (13), are showing a deep interest in helping out on the ranch.

"It's very gratifying for me to not only work with my sons, but to have those grandkids coming on, and wanting to," said Don.

Don remarked that on snow day recently, Madison and Ashley were up first thing in the morning scooping bunks at the ranch instead of sleeping in like their classmates.

"They're going to be just like my kids were," Don said.

Don is also very proud of the fact that both girls have started their own herds as a way to pay for college in the future, just like the Melchers before them. On top of that, Madison is a certified AI technician.

"I think the girls are just getting started, and I think they're going to continue [the tradition]," Don stated proudly.

As their program begins to change hands to the next generation of Melcher men and women, Don is certain that the Hereford breed is going to continue providing for his family, and will not cease to be the backbone of their ranch.

Carlson...

Showing Herefords in 4-H in the mid-70s and later in junior Hereford shows, Ross and Rob met many neighboring breeders who were influential to them. One of their local mentors was Mark Frederickson, Frederickson Herefords, who was raised on a neighboring farm but he later moved and expanded his ranch, 35 miles up the road at Starbuck. The family's remained close friends and purchased cattle back and forth. Other influential families and Hereford herds were Werk Polled Herefords of Herman, Elton Erickson of Kensington, and Delaney Herefords of Lake Benton.

When Ross went off to college at North Dakota State University (NDSU), he had the opportunity to go on the show road working for other Hereford operations including Tom Ihry, Hope, ND, Kevin Jensen, Courtland, KS, and John E Rice and Sons, Sheridan, WY, working alongside Ned and Jan Ward. From this experience, Ross gained exposure to Polled Herefords, showing cattle at many state fairs, Denver and Fort Worth Stock Show, Louisville and Kansas City. Long-term friendships, purchasing cattle from these herds, and utilizing genetics from these operations and other major programs in the 80s, is evident in the influence of the Carlson herd. Popular bulls used in A.I. were, Ihry Exceed and many Rice and Beartooth herdsires. Prominent herd sires include Delaney's Wrangler, Larson Red Sky, and Rangeline Online. Current sires used are NJW Sensation 028X 64E, NJW Hometown 10Y and SHF Ribeye.

Hereford cattle open doors

Hereford cattle brought Ross and his wife Beth together. Beth's family from Spring Valley, WI, (Larson Family Herefords) are long-time Hereford breeders, exhibiting cattle at the Minnesota State Fair for 55 years. As a result, Ross and Beth had the opportunity to meet and where married in 1992. They now live in Ross's grandparents' house on the West Central Minnesota farm. Beth brought one cow to the operation. Her brother Fred has served on the AHA board of directors.

Showing Herefords has not just been a foundation for both Ross's family and Beth's family, it has been a method of marketing their breeding program and enhancing their family's interest in the breed. Rob focuses on feeding steer calves to finish. Their access to corn and corn acres has provided for a successful program feeding out black-baldy and Hereford calves, adding to the overall value.

At the 2016 MN Beef Expo the Carlson family supported the donation heifer program, providing a heifer to a young person interested in learning more about beef cattle. "We have really enjoyed this experience and the opportunity to help Sydney Poquette, Wanamingo, with a heifer from our program," says Beth. ### Fed Steer Shootout

Ross and Beth's children, Mallory and Regan enrolled a sire group of Hereford steers they raised, in the 2017 NJHA Fed Steer Shootout with the outcome to measure performance and learn to interpret feedyard data. The steers were delivered to Gregory Feedlot in Tabor, IA, in the fall of 2016. When the feeding cycle concluded Mallory

With this success it didn't take long to decide to participate again in 2018. Regan went on to win the honor of overall champion in one of the pen groupings.

> Both Mallory and Regan have been actively involved in the Minnesota Junior Hereford Association, FFA, and 4-H. Mallory is a junior at South Dakota State University majoring in Animal Science and specializations in meat science, marketing and business. She served as the 2015 MN Hereford Queen and has participated in NJHE show, knowledge bowl, cook-off and was a member of the 2018 first place judging team.

Completing his senior year of high school, Regan is very busy playing football, basketball and baseball and wrapping up his sports participation with wins and division titles. Regan also raises and shows pigs for his FFA project. He is planning to attend SDSU in Fall 2019 majoring in Pharmacy and looking forward to coming back to a rural area once graduated.

Beth, Ross, Regan and Mallory Carlson meat cutter and clerk in the summer months. "I had the opportunity to wear a CHB® hat and help to educate customers about their retail purchases," says Mallory. She learned about meat cutting, preparing meat counters and selling beef to customers.

"I helped customers at the meat counter where CHB cuts and the 1881 Hereford line of beef were sold. I restocked product making sure all products were fresh. I learned there is a large cross-section of questions consumers had, some seemed simple to me, but I realized that is why we need to educate consumers more, because they haven't grown up on a farm or with cattle."

"I noticed Midwest people realize the value of a good steak and are willing to pay the price for it, however the store focused on a large variety and price points of cuts for the diverse customers base." Many questions asked were, 'What is your favorite steak? What steak is the best buy? What is CHB? How does CHB compare to Angus? Is it hormone-free'? "Since people had many different preferences, I enjoyed the challenge of all the questions," says Mallory. "The store sold a lot of ground beef, and many days we would sell out of sirloin and often ribeyes."

From Mallory's work experience at Cash Wise the entire family has gained a greater perspective of their role as a beef producer, how to share their story with consumers and the value of producing a high-quality product. The "Meet The Rancher" program has been an eye-opening experience for the entire family to discuss beef production with consumers.

The Carlson's are continually learning and participating as much as they can with a breed and industry they have enjoyed and that has provided for their livelihood. Just asking them about their cattle and Herefords and you can see the passion when their eyes light up and they start telling about their experiences, stories and friends they value.

Mama Cow

By Rachel Reinhold Lonetree Ranch, Sturgis, SD

We have a cow. A Hereford With horns that wrap around A big framed, well weathered mama. That I claimed a friend in the corral.

She lost her number And we didn't know How old or who she was So during this here story I named her "Mama cow."

A couple years ago, she calved And had a nice little bull! But his legs never worked right and he was lame right from the get go. So I started milking Mama Cow in the chute there by the barn. Bottle feeding the calf... Morning, noon and sunset For weeks it seemed I tried.

She got to know me pretty good. And Mama cow and I, We had an understanding. And she liked me I think in time.

She got to where I didn't need the chute

I just found her in the corral. She'd let me milk her and just stand there.

And she rarely did ever make me spill!

To help her little calf But he wasn't getting better And he died even though I tried my best.

I didn't want to quit my old friend So I kept her milking then Hoping maybe we'd get a calf and then maybe we could graft!

The years went by and more calves she raised.
She did a dandy job.
And she never quite forgot me.

As I scratched her favorite place

The corral, the pasture.

It really didn't matter.

She was always waiting.

But she's definitely getting older and I can see it in her eye.

The Dakota prairie has taken its toll.

And this winter has sure been long.

Well this fall she came up Open. And I was sad to see. I didn't want to sell her! My old friend. It couldn't be.

Then Dad said. "Keep her."
He knew and understood.
"We'll let her live out her days on the ranch" he said.
She's earned it for sure.

So I kept her in this winter. Fed her a little special. She's getting grain and scratching. And a nice warm place to lay!

Well this morning I was finishing up feeding.
And found her laying there.
She'd gotten pretty sick last night.
Now stretched out and having hard time breathing.

We sat her up as best we could. And I had tears on my face. So I kneeled and scratched her favorite place. And hoped that maybe she'd pull though.

I think I know she won't though. Tonight is looking not nice at all The temperatures is dropping and calling for ...45 below.

So I think we'll have to go out and do the hardest thing. Nothing lives forever. And ranchers hearts do break.

She's special.

Mama cow.

God gave her to us to provide

But the lump in my throat won't leave.

Yes. I know... "she's just a cow"

The hardest thing about ranching. It's not the daily battles. It's not - not being rich with money And it's sure enough not the cold.

It's the animals we care for The ones we call our own The livestock that surrounds us That God gave us - on the hills to roam.

For as with everything in life.
There is death as well.
And our responsibility comes hard sometimes.
But character demands this call.

So I'll say Goodbye to "my" old cow.
She lived a happy life.
She brought me joy and smiles.
And I'm thankful for this time.

And one thing I most definitely know. I'd want to live no other way. And Thank You, God for the lessons... I learned from "Mama Cow."

Editorial....

states will soon follow in doing this.

To say it is utter devastation in central and eastern Nebraska, parts of Iowa, and central to eastern South Dakota, is an understatement. As more snow melts, the problem compounds itself and grows into other states. Parts of central South Dakota and western Nebraska are dealing with massive amounts of snow and ice which, when it melts, will just go south.

My heart breaks for those of you who are losing cattle, property, homes, pets and family. I wish all of you who are dealing with the aftermath of these storms, continued strength, faith and good fortune to get through it and keep yourselves, your family and livestock safe and healthy.

Through all of this a person wonders how a cow withstands the cold temperatures and elements. Many of vou know the following but it might be useful to those who don't: "As the temperature drops, cow body heat needs to be maintained, which we can accomplish with extra feed," says Megan Van Emon, Montana State University Extension Beef Cattle Specialist. Utilizing forages, such as hay, will aid in maintaining body heat during cold temperatures through fermentation within the rumen. Dropping temperatures also increase nutrient requirements of cows, which may be increased by at least 50% as the temperature drops below zero."

On another subject, the American Hereford Association (AHA) and Neogen/GeneSeek have identified another genetic abnormality within the Hereford breed. To date it is only the fourth identified genetic defect for our breed. This one has an odd name: Maple Syrup Urine Disease (MSUD) but there is a good reason for the name.

According to the AHA, "The calves have a defect in an enzyme that breaks down complex amino acids in the diet and the buildup of these in the body creates the urine odor and brain damage. The disease name comes from the smell of urine observed in human babies (not always noted in calves)."

In describing the symptoms, the AHA says, "Calves are typically born without symptoms but by 2-4 days of age become slow, dull and eventually recumbent [lying flat, horizontal or stretched out]. The calves will often throw their heads back, lying on their side unable to rise. These calves may have some swelling of the brain at autopsy, but diagnosis requires laboratory investigation.

"Reports of MSUD to AHA and Dr. Steffen's lab at the University of Nebraska Lincoln are absent in recent years," said Jack Ward, AHA executive vice president. "With the estimated gene frequency of less than 1%, the current occurrence of calf losses is estimated at less than 20 per one million births and is likely going unrecognized. Even with this low incidence rate, testing of at-risk animals should be completed to ensure this abnormality does not propagate,"

I encourage you to read the AHA letter to the membership on this subject and check out the information in the Genetic Abnormalities section on the Hereford.org website.

We are fortunate it is a recessive gene and there is a test for it. It is certainly not the end of the world and breeding decisions can be worked around to avoid potential problems. It's always a good idea to study pedigrees if you aren't already.

This is our last issue of the spring and we will be back in August.

Best wishes for a good spring and summer, bumper crops, good calves and great weather!

Congratulations to Carmichael Herefords on their 50th Annual Sale!

After 2 postponements they were finally able to hold their sale on March 17th.

Sisters Averi Hebb and Kelci Bends from Cherry Creek, SD were all decked out for St. Patrick's Day at the Carmichael Sale.

Dorothy Carmichael helped celebrate the 50th Annual Carmichael Sale.

Bob Tenold, grandson Brian Glass and son Daron Tenold all purchased bulls at the Carmichael sale. They all ranch near Reva, SD and are long-time Carmichael customers

Ross and Kathy McPherson from the Sturgis, SD area. Their family has purchased bulls from Carmichaels for a long time, most if not all of the 50 years they've had bull sales.
